G-DORM project, which has been promoted with four partner universities in the Mekong countries, aims to "foster global SciTech leaders capable of solving regional vitalization issues from an integrative standpoint". In this symposium, we will review the achievements of the past five years plus one additional year.

In the first part, we will summarize the achievements of this project in English from the viewpoint of international education, inviting four partner universities in the Mekong region. In the second part, we will summarize the project in Japanese from the viewpoint of regional cooperation, inviting companies and organizations that accepted internships.

We look forward to your participation!

About G-DORM Project

G-DORM (Global Dormitory Education) project, developed by the Faculty of Engineering, is an international student exchange program conducted in collaboration with enterprises related to Niigata.

In this project, students from Niigata University and four partner universities (Royal University of Phnom Penh, National University of Laos, Chulalongkorn University, and Hanoi University of Science and Technology) form cross-academic year, cross-disciplinary, multinational team, and engage in short, medium, or long-term group-work (GW) internship. This GW internship, in which students work in English to solve regional vitalization issues, is a required course for our exchange program.
